How I Use This Resource:

I want my students to become self-motivated and be responsible for their own learning. For me, establishing a warm classroom culture of respect for each other and for learning is critical. This includes understanding each day how my students are feeling, and how this might affect their learning.

To that end, I ask my students to write down how they're feeling on an index card each morning, and to share those reflections with the class. I also ask my students to reflect on their learning experiences, and record those reflections on their weekly personalized learning plans.
